COURTNEY FORCED DOWN IN MID-ATLANTIC

5 FLEET LINERS RUSHING TO AID "WHALE"

SPUTTERED OUT CALL FOR HELP IN EARLY MORNING HOURS

PLANE DOWN ABOUT 720 MILES NORTHWEST OF HORTA, AZORES

A report was received this afternoon by the United Press from the steamship Minnewaska that Frank T. Courtney had been found 700 miles north of the Azores Islands.

New York, Aug. 2.—(UP)—Five fleet Atlantic liners were converging today on a spot in mid-Atlantic to rescue the flying boat Whale and its four occupants, forced down on a flight from the Azores to Newfoundland.

The Whale's radio sputtered out its call for help during the early morning hours and the ships of several nations combined in the race to save Capt. Frank T. Courtney and his companions.

The American ships President Hayes and Minnewaska, the White Star liners Celtic and Cedric, and the North German Lloyd liner Columbus, were definitely known to be speeding to the rescue.

Other vessels, including the Pennland, Gripsholm, Franconia and Thuringia, lent their wireless to the work and the safety of the Whale seemed almost assured.

She was down about 720 miles northwest of Horta, Azores, which she left at 1:55 P. M. EST yesterday, and about 880 miles southwest of Cape Race, Newfoundland, her goal. The latitude was 42 degrees north and longitude 41 west.

The call for help came about 5 A. M. EST, approximately 15 hours after the Whale left the Azores, and was picked up by several vessels.

Rescue appeared imminent shortly before noon today, as the Cedric was only about 100 miles from the Whale's position when she started to her aid.

Aboard S. S. Thuringia, Aug. 2.—(By radio to United Press) — The steamship President Hays has arrived at the approximate position in which Captain Frank T. Courtney's seaplane landed in the Atlantic but has been able to find no trace of the plane. Radio calls to the plane are unanswered.

At about 7 A. M. today our radio station received S. O. S. calls from Courtney's plane, which had gone down on the water, and reported it needed help immediately.

The plane reported its position as approximately 41 degrees north latitude, 41 west longitude.

Later this morning the President Hayes reported that she was rushing to help the seaplane and that she expected to arrive on the scene at 11 A. M., G. M. T. (6 A. M. EST).

The latest radio says that the President Hayes has reached the seaplane's position but had not seen it and that radio calls sent out to the plane have not been answered.

Our position at noon today was 47.25 north, 30.40 west. There is a three-mile northwest wind and the sea is smooth. The barometer is steady. I am sorry I am too far off to be helpful.

(The foregoing dispatch was radioed to the United Press by Capt. Molchin, commander of the S. S. Thuringia).

New York, Aug. 2.—Capt Frank T. Courtney and his three British companions were forced to land on the open sea today approximately half way between the Azores Islands and Newfoundland while attempting the second stage of their projected one-stop flight from Lisbon to North America.

Courtney communicated by radio with ships in the vicinity of his landing place and they in turn passed the word along to London and New York that the plane was in no immediate danger but needed help.

The steamships President Hayes, Minnewaska, Celtric and Cedric were reported to have left their regular courses to hasten to Courtney's aid. His position was given as in latitude 42 degrees north and longitude 41 west. That is approximately 720 miles out of Horta in the Azores and 880 miles from Newfoundland.

The Swedish motorship Gripsholm advised the Radio Marine Corporation here that the North German Lloyd steamer Columbus was also changing its course to go to the aid of the stranded plane.

Capt. Johnsen of the North German Lloyd liner Columbus today radioed his company's offices here that his vesel was 210 miles from the Dornier-Napier flying boat.

The liner Franconia was the first to notify the world that the Courtney plane was down. The Franconia sent its message to London saying "plane wants immediate help, but in no immediate danger. Steamers Cedric and Celtic are handling it."

Aboard S. S. Cedric, Aug. 2.—(By radio via Chatham, Mass.) — The American liners Minnewaska and President Hayes are in the vicinity of the Courtney plane, Whale, in latitude 42 north, longitude 41 west, and are searching for her, the S. S. Minnetonka advised us by radio today.

The Minnetonka advised all ships of the position of the Whale and the fact that the American steamers had reached there.

EFFORT OF G. O. P. TO WIN HEAVY NEGRO VOTE

LIBERAL PART OF REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN FUND TO BE SPENT IN SOUTH

COLORED VOTERS' DIVISION OF REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE FORMED

Washington, Aug. 2.—(UP) — A liberal part of the $4,000,000 the republicans expect to spend in their efforts to elect Herbert Hoover will probably be devoted to win negro votes.

This became evident today with announcement that a colored voters' division of the republican national committee had been formed to direct the campaign among members of the black race.

The announcement, made by Chairman Work of the national committee, did not specify whether an intensive drive was to be made among southern negroes. It was believed, however, that main efforts would be centered on the large negro voting population in New York, certain middle west states and the border territory.

How the remainder of the $4,000,000 republican war chest will be used is a matter of speculation. Perhaps one-third of it will be devoted to publicity and speakers. Other expenditures wil be made for special bureaus for labor, women, service men, foreign born voters, farmers, commercial travelers, clerical help and office maintenance.

Gov. Smith Turns Attention to Problems of Campaign, Farm Relief, Situation in South

DISCUSSES FARM RELIEF WITH G. N. PECK

LATTER IS FORMER REPUBLICAN AND CHAIRMAN CORN BELT COMMITTEE

RASKOB OF NATIONAL COMMITTEE, CAMPAIGN DIRECTOR, GIVES REPORT

New York, Aug. 2.—(UP) — Refreshed from his brief Long Island vacation, Governor Alfred E. Smith turned his attention today to presidential campaign problems, beginning with farm relief and the situation in the south.

He discussed agricultural relief with George N. Peek, former republican and chairman of the corn belt committee which still is agitating for the McNary-Haugen bill. Later, he will go aboard the yacht of William Todd, multi-millionaire ship manufacturer, for a cruise with Senator Swanson and Governor Byrd of Virginia, from whom he will receive reports on the south.

The conferences today are the first of a series the democratic presidential campaign wil hold here this week, covering every phase of the coming campaign. He received a full report on late campaign developments last night from Chairman John J. Raskob of the national committee, his campaign director.

There was keen interest, both in the democratic and republican camps, in his conference today with Peek, who will seek from Smith his interpretation of the farm plank in the democratic platform. Peek says it was an endorsement of the equalization fee principle of the McNary-Haugen bill.

Peek has indicated he will declare for Smith and use his influence for Smith's candidacy among western farm organizations if the democratic candidate's position is satisfactory.

New York, Aug. 2.—Such republican leaders as former Governor Lowden of Illinois, as well as democrats who have studied the farm problem will be called into discuss the agriculture situation with Governor Alfred E. Smith, if he is elected president, the governor said today, after a conference with George N. Peek, chairman of the corn belt committee.

Smith said also that he would discuss the farm problem at length in his acceptance speech at Albany on August 22.

"After my talk today with Mr. Peek I am more than ever satisfied," the governor said, "that the democratic platform soundly declares the fundamental basis for relief of the appalling agricultural distress which not only grips the farmer himself, but is destroying the farm market of $10,000,000,000 for the industries of the country.

"Control of the sale of agricultural surplus is recognized by our platform as an essential need, its cost to be imposed on the unit to be benefitted. That principle is fixed by our platform on which I stand—only the detail of its accomplishment remaining to be worked out.

"As I have said, I shall immediately, if I am elected, ask the best farm leaders and economists to work out this detail with me.

"I shall ask them to serve irrespective of locality or party.

"Republicans like former Governor Lowden as well as democrats who have studied this problem will be called upon by me for this patriotic service. I shall discuss this question at length in my acceptance speech."

Peek has been closely associated with Lowden in the campaign for the McNary-Haugen bill.

Governor Smith declined to go beyond the formal statement regarding his conference with the farm leader, and it was not learned what Peek told him about Lowden's present position.

Smith left after the two-hour conference for a cruise in the yacht of William H. Todd, multi-millionaire ship builder, with Senator Claude A. Swanson, Governor Harry Byrd, of Virginia, and Senator Peter G. Perry of Rhode Island. Perry is chairman of the national advisory committee and Byrd is a vice-chairman of the democratic national committee. It was expected they would discuss with Smith the situation in the south.

Disruption of communication lines was reported from many Minnesota towns. Hopkins, Olivia, Mankato, St. Cloud and other towns were either partly or completely cut off from the remainder of the state and in most cases local communication was badly affected.

At White Bear lake six racing yachts were overturned in the middle of the lake. All the occupants were rescued and the boats were towed to shore.

Two summer cottages near Chatfield were washed down the Root river and cattle were reported lost in the overflowing stream. Many persons were forced out of their resort homes between eight o'clock and midnight when rain beat through the flimsy cottages.

Corn in Fillmore and Winona counties were laid flat by the winds and grain was said to have been badly damaged.

TO CURB ACTIVITIES OF "TIPSTER SHEET" OPERATORS IN STATE

St. Paul, Aug. 2.—(U.P.)—Minnesota postal authorities and members of the state securities commission will cooperate in an effort to curb the activities of "tipster sheet" operators, according to an announcement by Donald Pomery, deputy securities commissioner.

The operators, claiming to give valuable information concerning the stock market, are said to have unloaded thousands of dollars in worthless stock on northwest investors. Contracts for information are made by mail but actual information is given by telephone or telegraph.

Efforts to curb the activities of the organizations are limited by lack of means to interfere with interstate communication.

Drs. Grove and Nicholson have a new static and X-ray machine installed in their office. The machine is of the McCoy make and it is said to be one of the finest ever placed on the market. The farmers living in the Mille Lacs Lake country are said to be making a move toward securing an electric line from Brainerd to the northwest corner of the lake. They figure if such a line could be built that a boat could pick up the products of the farmers and that it would be the means of settling up that country more rapidly.

The Northern Pacific has finally decided that the Sixth street crossing in this city is a dangerous proposition and the officials have taken the first steps to provide a safeguard by putting a flagman on at this point.

The new flagman is an old resident of this city, Thos. Crowell, and he will do battle with the throng that surges to and fro every noon about the depot. If he gets off in a year without an accident he certainly will be a lucky man.

FEDERAL RADIO COMMISSION IN INVESTIGATION

MAKING FIRSTHAND STUDY OF BROADCASTING SITUATION

COMMISSION HAS REDUCED BROADCASTER NUMBERS BY 36

Washington, Aug. 2. — (UP)—Several members of the federal radio commission left for their respective zones today to make a firsthand study of the broadcasting situation.

For several weeks, the commission has been holding daily sessions on the nation-wide reallocation plan called for by the Davis amendment to the raido act.

Since beginning its deliberations, the commission has reduced the number of broadcasters by 36, but it still has 650 stations to consider. Of this number, 128 smaller stations have received revocation notices, and the commission now is considering whether any of these shall be retained after Sept. 1.

When the commissioners return it is expected they will be in position to conclude their study of the broadcasting tangle and announce their final reallocation plan.

"Two Arabian Knights" Great Comedy Now at Lyceum

Army veterans and their families and friends must not fail to see "Two Arabian Knights," which opened to gales of laughter at the Lyceum yesterday. Here is a film production on a lavish scale which makes the serious part of the war secondary, basing its plot almost exclusively on those humorous incidents that doughboys of '18 will remember so well. There must have been many of them in the house last night, judging by the frequent outbursts of hearty laughter that punctuated the seemingly constant ripple of mirth.

Skins Too Valuable

Originally the conical lodges of Indians were made of skins. They are now made of cloth.

IMGRUNDS DISPLAY 1929 BUICK LINE

Radiator, Hood, and Body Lines Have Taken Departure From Buicks of Past

ENGINE POWER INCREASED

Bodies by Fisher Have Been Made Roomier by Introduction of New Style

With many radical changes the Silver Anniversary Buick for 1929 has been placed on display in all Buick showrooms throughout the country. The cars are being exhibited in Brainerd at the Imgrund garage local Buick dealer.

Radiator, hood, and body lines have taken a distinct departure from the Buicks of the past few years and while the six cylinder valve-in-head motor is retained both engines have been enlarged to give 17 per cent increased power and a faster "get-away," John T. Imgrund said. The introduction of the Silver Anniversary Buick also marks the Silver Anniversary of the Pence Automobile Company of Minneapolis, northwest Buick distributors.

Eighteen models on three different wheel bases, the 116 inch, the 121 inch and the 129 inch, are included in the line for 1929. Sixteen of them are of the closed type, while two of them are open models.

The bodies, which are all by Fisher, have been made roomier by the introduction of an entirely new style which has a sort of graceful bulging effect at the center beading. Interiors have been greatly improved and the finest of appointments are to be found in all models. The instrument panels are entirely new, a 90-mile speedometer being mounted directly befor the driver and a new hydrostatic gasoline gauge is provided on the panel.

An electric windshield wiper having two sweepers is another one of the features of the new cars. The wiper is controlled by a button on the instrument board and is wired in series with the ignition switch insuring against the operation of the wiper when the motor it not running. Direct and indirect lighting of the instrument panel is accomplished by a button switch located on the vanel.

Mechanically the Silver Anniversary Buick is almost unbelievably improved. With the valve-in-head motor conceded to be the most powerful type of power plant known, the two engines have been made stronger through increasing the bore and stroke, larger crankshaft, larger bearings, pistons, and pins.

The power increase, Buick engineers point out, has been obtained largely through the refinements in the engine. There has been an 11 per cent increase in the piston displacement of the larger engine and a 12 per cent increase in th smaller. The balance of the added power is due to changes in the carburetor and manifold system, redesigning of the camshaft and the provsion of a new muffler in which the back pressure has been reduced to the minimum. There has also been a marked improvement in the automatic heat control unit built into the fuel intake system. This device is responsible for the Buick engine's quick start in cold weather. Two high speed jets have this year been built into the carburetor instead of one as in the past.

Lincoln Said $10,000 Was Too Much!

They say that Lincoln was once offered a $10,000 a year job, but declined because he thought it would be impossible for one man to earn such an enormous sum. Today a salary of $10,000 a year would awaken no comment.

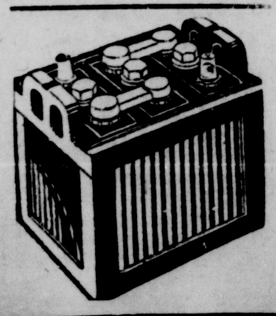

The worth of anything — whether it is a man's services, or a piece of merchandise, is entirely a matter of opinion, and changes from day to day. That is why we never quote comparative prices. When a dress is marked down because it has been in our stock for several weeks, we do not mention its former price because it is no longer worth that much. Its style-value has depreciated.

FAT PEOPLE

MANY people, especially the thin, slender ones, cast pitying eyes at fat people, but the fats have one advantage, they can worry through a hot summer with some degree of comfort. And the same way, they can stand the rigors of winter with the same degree of equanimity.

True, once in a while a fat person is overcome with the desire to be slender and sacrifices all comfort by proceeding to diet and exercise. If of heroic mood, the immolation continues, but oftentimes near starvation of dieting is succeeded by a wolfish appetite that promises to add more layers to accumulated weight.

Fat people are generally of a calm, methodical, philosophical temperament. They take life as it comes, they solve problems as they come upon the scene of life, they spend no idle time building air castles and erecting bridges and crossing them before they are encountered in life's journey.

Julius Caesar well recognized this trait of fat people and his councils of state were generally attended by fat boys.

Some of the best golfers in history are big heavyweights. In our defense of the fat people, we wish to cast no slights upon the slender. Deep down in the heart of every fat person is a consuming desire to be slender or at least not to weight as much as one does.

It takes both kind to make a world and garment manufacturers would have to re-arrange price schedules if fat people were the only ones to cater to.

FRANKLY SELFISH

THEY are harping on the same old string, says the Toledo Blade. Speakers addressing a meeting of the Great Lakes-Hudson association in New York expressed antagonism to the St. Lawrence sea cut project for the season that its completion would hurt the shipping interests of that port.

The first part of the hyphenated name of this Eastern organization is camouflage. Interests of the members are not primarily in or of the Great Lakes, but chiefly if not wholly in New York harbor and the Hudson river. Frankly selfish in their opposition to the St. Lawrence waterway, they are correct in the contention that it would divert some business from New York.

The fact that such organized opposition exists is the best possible proof that the St. Lawrence development would be of great benefit to all the people west of New York, and particularly to the grain growers of both the United States and Canada, by providing a means of cheaper transportation of foodstuffs and other commodities of all kinds.

It is regrettable that New York is threatened with any loss of business, but certainly the argument is wholly lacking in logic that millions of people should continue to bear the burdens of unscientific and wasteful methods of transportation in order that one port may continue to collect a fat profit.

THE RAILROADS WILL STAY

DON'T make the mistake of thinking that any form of transportation so far developed will replace the railroads, says Forbes Magazine. They are in business to stay. In their places, trucks are indispensible. But as wholesale purveyors of transportation the rails have a distinct field to themselves. President Byram, of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, recently brought this point out very clearly. In an address at Hollandale, Minn.—the center of 15,000 acres of rich farm land that was quagmire less than two years ago—to the townspeople who were celebrating the entrance of two rail lines, he said:

"We hear more or less about the advantages of transportation by motor truck, and I cannot refrain from calling attention to the fact that right here, within a short distance of important markets, truck lines could not be seriously considered as an adequate transportation medium.

"It would take one truck every minute for three months to move the products of this section, this season, to the nearest railroad. With the return empty movement, this would mean one truck in or out every 30 seconds for three months.

"It was found that the investment required to afford truck service would be greater than the cost of building railroads."

That's why railroads will stay in business.

NEW IDEA ON HIGHWAY SPEED

THERE are some states which now have no speed limit on the open highway. If accidents happen, those whose cars are damaged or people injured, are judged according to how they drove, if their driving was done in a reckless manner.

Reckless driving is not necessarily judged by speed alone. A slow driver, moving 20 miles an hour on a trunk road, may be a more reckless driver than one driving at a 35 mile an hour gait.

And a lot of drivers who repair tires and take up half the highway of a trunk line are more reckless than many drivers touring at any speed. The driver who makes a sudden stop with his four-wheel brakes and fails to give a hand signal in day time is reckless too and endangers the stream of traffic following him.

Michigan, we are told, permits a driver to go 50 miles an hour on a straight highway not impeded by other traffic.

THE CAMPAIGN

THE campaign of Republicans and Democrats, so far as we see it, has been conducted in a most dignified and orderly manner. So far we have had interpretations of the two platforms by the press, we have had announcements of coming notification speeches.

Hoover went fishing and Smith took an outing. Hoover found his quiet in the west, Smith stuck to the family's regular outing place at Long Island in the east.

One side dwells on the humanitarian spirit shown by Hoover in taking care of thousands of orphans in war time and after. The other side tells of what Smith has done on the East Side of New York and throughout the state.

SOME people are never satisfied. When Tunney declares he will retire from the ring, they maintain he should not cast aside a championship. Tunney, however, will use his success in the fighting game as a stepping stone to higher things. And he is the first pugilist who is of a scholarly bent of mind.

Mary Had a Latch Key

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

THERE was an attractive sort of indolence about Mary that on ordinary occasions kept her from being especially talkative. But on occasions she was voluble, not to say actually eloquent. This was one of the occasions.

"Well if you don't give me a latch key I shall realize that you are not at all the enlightened parents I had thought you were," she told her father and mother as she stood before them in the living room.

Mr. Stevens interrupted with a weary sigh. "Oh, give her the key," he said to his wife. "She's crazy—they're crazy—we're crazy to give it to her—but I can't stand her nagging."

And having received the coveted key Mary kissed her parents very sweetly, and explained that the reason she especially wanted the key was because she was going to be escorted to the club dance that evening by Frank Ormsby, a young man as she thought of much importance. "He's Miss Sally Ormsby's nephew and he's visiting her and he's been perfectly adorable to me, and he'll bring me home after the dance and if he thought I didn't have a latch key he'd just think I was a little country simpleton, I suppose."

Her parents were slumbering in their room at the back of the house when at about one o'clock Frank Ormsby's car rolled up. He had been telling Mary that he thought she was the cleverest girl he had ever met and was just wondering whether he dared tell her that he had also considered her the prettiest.

"Of course you'll come in for a while," she said. "We'll just slip in without disturbing anyone. I thought perhaps I'd make some coffee or something."

"You don't mean to say you have your own latch key," said Frank Ormsby—then he whistled and afterward he laughed. "I'd awfully well like to come in," he said, "and I wish I had known—but you see I'm not so privileged as you are. Aunt Sally sits up for me and I told her I'd be home at one—and I just can't keep her sitting up. Let me come tomorrow, any time—please—why, Mary!"

For Mary had jerked herself away from him and had run up the path to the house. He hurried to her and tried to take the key from her hand. "You can just hurry home," she said. "I'm jolly well able to let myself in, thank you. Good night, Mr. Ormsby. I said—good night."

And Frank feeling as if the stars had suddenly fallen from the sky retreated down the path into his car and started slowly down the road while Mary was fumbling with the key. Looking back he saw her still fumbling, then he turned the car around and drove slowly back.

"The darn thing won't work," said the dejected Mary when he reached her side. "I guess they gave me the wrong key. Oh, I think it is too dreadful!" And Mary promptly began to weep. After that they rang the door bell—which sounded in the kitchen and could hardly be heard on the upper floors. They went around to the back of the house and threw pebbles against the window of the parental bedroom. Then Mary called—first cautiously, then with all her might. Still no response.

"I hate to keep your aunt waiting up any longer—" said Mary.

"I'm not worried about Aunt Sally," said Frank, "but I am worried about you."

"Maybe I could go home with you and telephone to my house. That might wake them."

Sally Ormsby who didn't look very much older than her nephew greeted Frank and Mary. "But first you must stop and have a bite with us. I told Delia to leave some sandwiches on the buffet and there's ginger ale on the ice. We can telephone after that. But you don't mean, Mary, that you have a latch key? I knew some of the village girls had latch keys, but I'd no idea your mother—well, bless my heart, and you're only a child. Frank, do girls in the city have latch keys?"

"Not if there's anyone who cares enough for them to wait up—"

But Mary had flown to the telephone. After five minutes' effort the operator would only report: "They do not answer."

"But it will be quite all right for you to stay here," said Miss Ormsby. "I'll telephone your mother the first thing, so don't hurry in the morning."

"Mary's a dear," said Miss Ormsby to her nephew after she had shown her to her room. A look of quick comprehension passed between them. "But don't let her carry a latch key after you are engaged."

"Do you suppose she'd have me?"

"Of course she would," said Aunt Sally, and looking up they saw a very much confused, but very pretty young girl in the doorway. "I'm sorry," she faltered. "But I was so afraid they would worry and I just stole down to try to get them on the telephone again. I thought you'd gone to bed—I—"

"Perhaps I was wrong," said Aunt Sally.

"Oh, no," said Mary—and then, "I don't believe I understood what you were saying—that is—I never was so embarrassed in my life—"

"Poor lamb," said Aunt Sally as Frank took Mary in his arms.

FAMOUS BELL BACK IN SAN FRANCISCO

Used in Early Days to Call Out Citizens.

San Francisco.—Priceless relic of early days in San Francisco, the Vigilante bell that used to summon the people to council and war at Fort Gunnybags, here in the '50s, has been hung in the marine deaprtment of the chamber of commerce, a gift to the chamber from the First Baptist church of Petaluma.

Stirring memories of those times which tried the hearts of San Francisco's best men and the necks of her worst were recalled when Robert Newton Lynch, vice president and general manager of the chamber, announced the presentation. It was through his efforts that the bell was brought back here.

The bell was purchased in 1856 by the Vigilante committee, of which W. T. Coleman was then president. It was bought from a Boston firm of metal workers, Conroy & Connors, weighed 1,100 pounds, and cost $1,500. It is bronze.

Hung in the steeple of old Fort Gunnybags, it sounded the death knell of many a reckless villain, proclaimed peace and victory to the upright and struck terror to the hearts of the vicious when the Vigilantes found it necessary to take the law into their own hands.

In 1858, when the bell no longer was required, the residents of Petaluma bought it from the Vigilantes for $550 and hung it in their first Baptist church. There it was used both for religious services and as a time bell, sounding the hour at 6 a. m., noon, and 6 p. m.

When the Civil war started, Union sympathizers rang it to announce Northern victories and those friendly to the Southern cause became angry. To prevent discord among members of the community, the bell was taken down and hauled away one dark night to a warehouse. A few hours later Northern sympathizers returned it to the steeple, hoisting the Stars and Stripes above it.

The next night a Southerner made his way unobserved into the belfry, and with a hammer sought to silence the bell forever. He made a big crack in it, not unlike that in the famous Liberty bell, but this had no silencing effect. The bell remained in use until 1907, and its chimes could be heard through the countryside within a ten-mile radius.

Future Seaplanes to Be Less Cumbersome

Langley Field, Va.—Seaplanes of the future need not be so cumbersome as those of the past.

This has been established by experts of the national advisory committee for aeronautics in a minute examination of the work actually done by a seaplane's pontoons, which enable it to alight on water, but cut down its speed in the air.

Present specifications for navy seaplanes call for pontoons having a structure sufficiently strong to withstand a shock on landing of 15 pounds to the square inch. Measurements made here with delicate instruments attached to various points on the floating surface of pontoons in operation, however, show that only seven pounds of pressure is exerted to the square inch, suggesting that their strength can easily be reduced with a material saving in weight and a corresponding improvement in performance and endurance in the air.

Wants Typist Job, But Has Only One Hand

Detroit, Mich.—Mrs. Flora Parker is looking for a job as typist or stenographer and she has only one arm.

When she was two and one-half years old in London she was the victim of an accident. After she grew up she taught school in London and then there was a young chap who had "gone out," as they say over there, to Canada. He sent for her. They were married. Two years later there was a baby and then, suddenly, Mrs. Parker was the Widow Parker. Little Flora is three.

"I intend to make my own living," she said. "It is going to be difficult to make any prospective employer believe that I can be efficient. I can be. I am fast on the typewriter and my missing arm has never been a missing one to me. You see, I lost it so young that I never knew its use, and what we never have we do not miss."

Kill Sacred Cow

Simla, India.—Six persons were killed and nine wounded near here when a party of pilgrims attempted to prevent the slaughter of a cow held sacred by them. The cow was killed, and a riot ensued.

Canned Music Stirs Ire of Paris Critics

Paris.—Something must be done to head off canned music, say the terribly shocked musical critics who contemplate the speedy abolition of the element in orchestras. It is the recent excitement over machine played violins, the perfection of phonographs, and the construction of mechanical orchestras for motion picture houses that has stirred the classic ire of the judges of the press.

Love's Ecstasy
by May Christie

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

ALEDA RAY, pretty country girl, working in New York as a stenographer, is in love with Gary Chester, young engineer. She is living with Marise de Rense, whose young sister, Goldie, is secretly engaged in a blackmailing game with Clive Mortimer, ne'er-do-well Englishman. Goldie and Mortimer receive a "commission" to arrange a party for Smithson, wealthy rounder. Goldie, jealous of Aleda, tricks her into attending the party and then notifies Gary that he will find Aleda there.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

GARY CHESTER—tricked by Goldie into arriving at the scene of Mr. Smithson's (alias Briggs') hectic party in the roof-apartment—confronted Aleda in an astonished dismay.

From the moment he had received the typewritten note sent to the Yale Club, beginning: "Gary ole dear," and signed "Aleda," he had experienced a chilling sense of disappointment and misgiving that now, at this moment, was further borne out. . . .

That note had been so "cheap" . . . had shown so easy a familiarity, that it had startled him. It was so utterly out of keeping with the shy, woodland sweetness and reserve and dignity of the young girl who had so fascinated him a few hours back! So contrary to his conception of her character!

That the missive had been written and dispatched by another and that Aleda was totally ignorant of the trick, did not occur to him.

He understood that she had asked him to come here, and—despite his misgiving—her attraction was so strong that it had drawn him to the spot.

It was a Bacchanalian scene. On a low divan in the long living-room (someone had disconnected several of the lamps, and the lighting was sketchy—uncertain) a middle-aged man with rumpled hair and collar held on his lap—giggling, protesting and making a coquettish show of struggling—a young girl. Another couple sat with their arms frankly entwined about each other, sipping alternately out of the same glass.

An electric piano hammered out a very jazzy air. Smithson—alias Briggs—the host, was tugging at Aleda's arm, and plaintively and—due to excess of alcohol—thickly, murmuring—"C'mon! Le'sh dance! Wanna pa'sh my arm roun' you 'gain! Don't be sh'tand-offish!"

Aleda's cheeks were scarlet. A strand of her pretty hair had come unloosened, as though she had recently been in a skirmish. A great splash of red wine—it smelled like port!—was all down the front of her frock. (He could not know that Goldie, making it seem like an accident, had purposely done this deed!)

Speechless for a moment, Gary's eye rested on the crushed, expensive orchids pinned in the bosom of Aleda's gown. Somehow, broken and flattened, yet at the same time curling wickedly, like greedy, waxen fingers, they gave the last touch of dissipation to the appearance of the girl. Dancing with her to this hateful music, which one—or was it all—of these middle-aged roues (Gary's glance shot furiously around the scene) had been holding Aleda in a bear-like embrace?

He felt like murder! He felt as though all his castles in Spain . . . his dreams . . . had toppled down!

The disordered supper table—array of bottles—a couple of smashed glasses—the maudlin behavior of some of the guests—(a fat man with a rose behind his ear and a rose held in his teeth was trying to give an elephantine tango solo)—bore witness to the kind of an affair this was!

Aleda—forget-me-not blue eyes unnaturally bright—(he did not attribute their brilliance to tears that lurked so near the surface!) delicate pink cheeks an unbecoming crimson—could this be the same "ideal girl" whose shy and beguiling modesty he had worshiped a few hours back?

"I got your message. I came," he repeated, like an automaton.

And at that moment a red-haired little gamin of a girl who—for the second time that day!—had watched him through the crack of a door—and calculated—ran forward, oh! so girlishly, albeit piquantly, and caught him by the arm and drew him out of earshot, whispering rapidly:—"If you're any friend of Aleda's, take her right home! She doesn't know how to take care of herself! I've been worried sick——"

There was something familiar in her red-gold curls, the tip-tilted little nose, the elfin face.

"Haven't I met you somewhere?" Gary asked.

Goldie gave him a provocative glance from her green eyes. It was not too bold or too "come hither-ish"! She had "got his number." He wouldn't care for blatancy. She was a shrewd young miss.

"If you come to the Harvest Moon tomorrow night, maybe you'll remember?" Then, suddenly, and before he had time for answer: "You take Aleda home! I can't persuade her! She's not herself tonight—I only came here to keep an eye on her—she's awfully strong-headed—but maybe she'll mind what you say?"

The elfin little figure, one finger to her lips to enjoin silence, flitted away.

Gary, his mind full of disturbing cross currents, approached Aleda. He said, briefly, and with no preamble: "I'm here to take you home."

The host made violent protest. He followed the pair to the elevator, arguing volubly.

He let in the clutch, trod on the accelerator and the machine sprang forward.

"I—I—it was good of you—to come—I'm frightfully sorry——" She was stammering in her humiliation—and afraid. Why on earth had Goldie telephoned the last man in the world she would wish to see her in such company? Even if she had been frightened, what on earth had possessed the other girl?

Aleda did not know that Goldie's phone-call had not reached its object. Aleda knew nothing of Goldie's "cheap," familiar letter to this man, forged in her own name.

"I wish I'd known"

There's always a new experience ahead—something you haven't done before and which calls for a decision.

You become engaged—and immediately you are called upon to decide on the purchase of many, many things you never bought before.

You marry—and furniture, draperies, silverware, china, talking machines, oil-burners, gas-stoves, automobiles claim your dollars and call for your choice.

A baby comes—and again you face a new experience in purchasing clothes and powders and blankets; in buying a crib, baby-carriage, foods, toys.

Next—what school? For the years pass incredibly fast. Once more, a new decision.

Every room in your house requires a choice. Every meal served in your dining-room results from your having decided on what to serve. Every day confronts you with a multitude of possibilities from which you must select those which make life happier and better, and make the dollars go farther.

How on earth are you going to make those decisions? How can you know what you want and what you don't want? How can you buy to such advantage that you'll seldom, if ever, have occasion to use that futile phrase, "I wish I'd bought something else"?

FAT PEOPLE

MANY people, especially the thin, slender ones, cast pitying eyes at fat people, but the fats have one advantage, they can worry through a hot summer with some degree of comfort. And the same way, they can stand the rigors of winter with the same degree of equanimity.

True, once in a while a fat person is overcome with the desire to be slender and sacrifices all comfort by proceeding to diet and exercise. If of heroic mood, the immolation continues, but oftentimes near starvation of dieting is succeeded by a wolfish appetite that promises to add more layers to accumulated weight.

Fat people are generally of a calm, methodical, philosophical temperament. They take life as it comes, they solve problems as they come upon the scene of life, they spend no idle time building air castles and erecting bridges and crossing them before they are encountered in life's journey.

Julius Caesar well recognized this trait of fat people and his councils of state were generally attended by fat boys.

Some of the best golfers in history are big heavyweights. In our defense of the fat people, we wish to cast no slights upon the slender. Deep down in the heart of every fat person is a consuming desire to be slender or at least not to weight as much as one does.

It takes both kind to make a world and garment manufacturers would have to re-arrange price schedules if fat people were the only ones to cater to.

FRANKLY SELFISH

THEY are harping on the same old string, says the Toledo Blade. Speakers addressing a meeting of the Great Lakes-Hudson association in New York expressed antagonism to the St. Lawrence sea cut project for the season that its completion would hurt the shipping interests of that port.

The first part of the hyphenated name of this Eastern organization is camouflage. Interests of the members are not primarily in or of the Great Lakes, but chiefly if not wholly in New York harbor and the Hudson river. Frankly selfish in their opposition to the St. Lawrence waterway, they are correct in the contention that it would divert some business from New York.

The fact that such organized opposition exists is the best possible proof that the St. Lawrence development would be of great benefit to all the people west of New York, and particularly to the grain growers of both the United States and Canada, by providing a means of cheaper transportation of foodstuffs and other commodities of all kinds.

It is regrettable that New York is threatened with any loss of business, but certainly the argument is wholly lacking in logic that millions of people should continue to bear the burdens of unscientific and wasteful methods of transportation in order that one port may continue to collect a fat profit.

This has been established by experts of the national advisory committee for aeronautics in a minute examination of the work actually done by a seaplane's pontoons, which enable it to alight on water, but cut down its speed in the air.

Present specifications for navy seaplanes call for pontoons having a structure sufficiently strong to withstand a shock on landing of 15 pounds to the square inch. Measurements made here with delicate instruments attached to various points on the floating surface of pontoons in operation, however, show that only seven pounds of pressure is exerted to the square inch, suggesting that their strength can easily be reduced with a material saving in weight and a corresponding improvement in performance and endurance in the air.

Wants Typist Job, But Has Only One Hand

Detroit, Mich.—Mrs. Flora Parker is looking for a job as typist or stenographer and she has only one arm.

When she was two and one-half years old in London she was the victim of an accident. After she grew up she taught school in London and then there was a young chap who had "gone out," as they say ove there, to Canada. He sent for her. They were married. Two years later there was a baby and then, suddenly, Mrs. Parker was the Widow Parker. Little Flora is three.

"I intend to make my own living," she said. "It is going to be difficult to make any prospective employer believe that I can be efficient. I can be. I am fast on the typewriter and my missing arm has never been a missing one to me. You see, I lost it so young that I never knew its use, and what we never have we do not miss."

Simla, India.—Six persons were killed and nine wounded near here when a party of pilgrims attempted to prevent the slaughter of a cow held sacred by them. The cow was killed, and a riot ensued.

Canned Music Stirs Ire of Paris Critics

Paris.—Something must be done to head off canned music, say the terribly shocked musical critics who contemplate the speedy abolition of the element in orchestras. It is the recent excitement over machine played violins, the perfection of phonographs, and the construction of mechanical orchestras for motion picture houses that has stirred the classic ire of the judges of the press.

Love's Ecstasy
by May Christie

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

ALEDA RAY, pretty country girl, working in New York as a stenographer, is in love with Gary Chester, young engineer. She is living with Marise de Rense, whose young sister, Goldie, is secretly engaged in a blackmailing game with Clive Mortimer, ne'er-do-well Englishman. Goldie and Mortimer receive a "commission" to arrange a party for Smithson, wealthy rounder. Goldie, jealous of Aleda, tricks her into attending the party and then notifies Gary that he will find Aleda there.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

GARY CHESTER—tricked by Goldie into arriving at the scene of Mr. Smithson's (alias Briggs') hectic party in the roof-apartment—confronted Aleda in an astonished dismay.

From the moment he had received the typewritten note sent to the Yale Club, beginning: "Gary ole dear," and signed "Aleda," he had experienced a chilling sense of disappointment and misgiving that now, at this moment, was further borne out. . . .

That note had been so "cheap" . . . had shown so easy a familiarity, that it had startled him. It was so utterly out of keeping with the shy, woodland sweetness and reserve and dignity of the young girl who had so fascinated him a few hours back! So contrary to his conception of her character!

That the missive had been written and dispatched by another and that Aleda was totally ignorant of the trick, did not occur to him.

He understood that she had asked him to come here, and—despite his misgiving—her attraction was so strong that it had drawn him to the spot.

It was a Bacchanalian scene. On a low divan in the long living-room (someone had disconnected several of the lamps, and the lighting was sketchy—uncertain) a middle-aged man with rumpled hair and collar held on his lap—giggling, protesting and making a coquettish show of struggling—a young girl. Another couple sat with their arms frankly entwined about each other, sipping alternately out of the same glass.

An electric piano hammered out a very jazzy air. Smithson—alias Briggs—the host, was tugging at Aleda's arm, and plaintively and—due to excess of alcohol—thickly, murmuring—"C'mon! Le'sh dance! Wanna pa'sh my arms roun' you 'gain! Don't be sh'tand-offish!"

Aleda's cheeks were scarlet. A strand of her pretty hair had come unloosened, as though she had recently been in a skirmish. A great splash of red wine—it smelled like port!—was all down the front of her frock. (He could not know that Goldie, making it seem like an accident, had purposely done this deed!)

Speechless for a moment, Gary's eye rested on the crushed, expensive orchids pinned in the bosom of Aleda's gown. Somehow, broken and flattened, yet at the same time curling wickedly, like greedy, waxen fingers, they gave the last touch of dissipation to the appearance of the girl. Dancing with her to this hateful music, which one—or was it all—of these middle-aged roues (Gary's glance shot furiously around the scene) had been holding Aleda in a bear-like embrace?

He felt like murder? He felt as though all his castles in Spain . . . his dreams . . . had toppled down!

The disordered supper table—array of bottles—a couple of smashed glasses—the maudlin behavior of some of the guests—(a fat man with a rose behind his ear and a rose held in his teeth was trying to give an elephantine tango solo)—bore witness to the kind of an affair this was!

Aleda—forget-me-not blue eyes unnaturally bright—(he did not attribute their brilliance to tears that lurked so near the surface!) delicate pink cheeks an unbecoming crimson—could this be the same "ideal girl" whose shy and beguiling modesty he had worshiped a few hours back?

"I got your message. I came," he repeated, like an automaton.

And at that moment a red-haired little gamin of a girl who—for the second time that day!—had watched him through the crack of a door—and calculated—ran forward, oh! so girlishly, albeit piquantly, and caught him by the arm and drew him out of earshot, whispering rapidly:—"If you're any friend of Aleda's, take her right home! She doesn't know how to take care of herself! I've been worried sick——"

There was something familiar in her red-gold curls, the tip-tilted little nose, the elfin face.

"Haven't I met you somewhere?" Gary asked.

Goldie gave him a provocative glance from her green eyes. It was not too bold or too "come hither-ish"! She had "got his number." He wouldn't care for blatancy. She was a shrewd young miss.

"If you come to the Harvest Moon tomorrow night, maybe you'll remember?" Then, more gently, and before he had time to answer: "You take Aleda home! I can't persuade her! She's not herself tonight—I only came here to keep an eye on her—she's awfully strong-headed—but maybe she'll mind what you say?"

The elfin little figure, one finger to her lips to enjoin silence, flitted away.

Gary, his mind full of disturbing cross currents, approached Aleda. He said, briefly, and with no preamble: "I'm here to take you home."

The host made violent protest. He followed the pair to the elevator, arguing volubly.

He let in the clutch, trod on the accelerator and the machine sprang forward.

"I—I—it was good of you—to come—I'm frightfully sorry——" She was stammering in her humiliation—and afraid. Why on earth had Goldie telephoned the last man in the world she would wish to see her in such company? Even if she had been frightened, what on earth had possessed the other girl?

Aleda did not know that Goldie's phone-call had not reached its object. Aleda knew nothing of Goldie's "cheap," familiar letter to this man, forged in her own name.

"I wish I'd known"

There's always a new experience ahead—something you haven't done before and which calls for a decision.

You become engaged—and immediately you are called upon to decide on the purchase of many, many things you never bought before.

You marry—and furniture, draperies, silverware, china, talking machines, oil-burners, gas-stoves, automobiles claim your dollars and call for your choice.

A baby comes—and again you face a new experience in purchasing clothes and powders and blankets; in buying a crib, baby-carriage, foods, toys.

Next—what school? For the years pass incredibly fast. Once more, a new decision.

Every room in your house requires a choice. Every meal served in your dining-room results from your having decided on what to serve. Every day confronts you with a multitude of possibilities from which you must select those which make life happier and better, and make the dollars go farther.

How on earth are you going to make those decisions? How can you know what you want and what you don't want? How can you buy to such advantage that you'll seldom, if ever, have occasion to use that futile phrase, "I wish I'd bought something else"?

Our Olympic Shot Tossers

By QUIN HALL.

OUR BOYS who sailed away on the President Roosevelt to stretch their muscular arms in the business of tossing the 16-pound shot go into action this afternoon at Amsterdam.

And in this event, as in almost all of the field and track events, Uncle Sam is ably represented. The shot-putting aggregation is composed of Herman H. Brix, University of Washington; H. P. Rothert, Stanford University; John Kuck, Los Angeles A. C., and Eric Krenz, Stanford. These metal handlers finished the finals at Cambridge in the order named, and it will be noticed that all of them hail from the Pacific Coast, which should prove something or other about the Pacific Coast.

Brix, from the far Northwest, won the U. S. finals at Cambridge with a toss which came within a quarter of an inch of the world's record of 51 feet. This world's mark was rung up by Ralph Rose in August of 1909, and Brix's mark not only came within a fraction of this figure but was well over the best Olympic mark of 50 feet 3 7-8 inches, achieved by P. J. McDonald during the Stockholm meet in 1912.

When it comes to the weight events the United States will undoubtedly meet some keen foreign competition. While the U. S. holds the Olympic records in all of the weight contests, our entries may have difficulty in establishing their supremacy in the shotput this afternoon, despite the remarkable performance of the Washington crack. But if Brix can duplicate the toss he made at Cambridge he will finish, if not at the top, then only a scant distance behind the leader. Krenz, a powerful weight hurler, may surprise everyone by doing the unlooked-for. Eric is capable and so is Rothert and Kuck. The result of this event will be looked forward to with interest.

Another final which will be run off this afternoon is the hop, step and jump, and while the chief interest from a U. S. standpoint in this event centers around Levi Casey, the National champion from Los Angeles, who won the final at Cambridge, a lot of our folks will be watching the destiny of Bob Kelly, the forty-year-old athlete representing the Olympic Club of San Francisco. Bob, it will be recalled, is the fellow who has been seeking athletic fame over a number of years. Starting as a youngster he has kept consistently at it. Each year he would pick out some new event and practice for a season at that event. Meeting failure meant only the selecting of another event the following year, and Bob finally made good in the triple leap, and he's a member of this year's team. If only as a reward for persistency, it would tickle all of the folks over here if Kelly finds a place for himself among the leaders in this event. Besides Casey and Kelly the other members of the team for this contest are Sidney Bowman, the high school youth from Hammond, La., who finished second to Casey at Cambridge, and Lloyd H. Bourgeois, of the Southern Pacific A. A., New Orleans.

The final for the 1,500-meter for men and the 800-meter for women are also scheduled for this afternoon at Amsterdam. At Cambridge, Ray Conger, of the Illinois A. S., won this event and established a new American record of 3:55. Other members of the U. S. team in this contest will be Sid Robertson, New York A. C.; Nick Carter, Los Angeles A. C., and Lloyd Hahn, Boston A. A. The fellows in this race are sure to meet some good competition from foreign entries, but Uncle Sam should grab some winning points in all of these various finals.

NEXT HEAVYWEIGHT TO COME UP FROM FIGHTERS' RANKS

TEX RICKARD BELIEVES HE WILL BE SOME UNKNOWN YOUNGSTER

WILL CATAPULT TO HIGHEST FISTIC FAME OVER NIGHT, HE DECLARES

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Aug. 2.—(UP)—"The next heavyweight champion will come up from the ranks," Tex Rickard said to this correspondent after Gene Tunney announced his retirement from the ring.

The premier promoter of all time believes that the next champion will be some unknown youngster who will catapult to fame over night.

Unless Rickard can uncover some youngster with a punch, the heavyweight elimination tournament which he will stage, beginning in September, is likely to prove as much a disappointment as the last tournament which developed into Tom Heeney as the challenger for Gene Tunney's title.

The first step toward clarifying the heavyweight situation was not made by Rickard, but Humbert J. Fugazy who matched Johnny Risko of Cleveland with Roberti, the giant Italian, for a ten round bout at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, August 15.

Danny Dunn, Risko's manager, holds a grudge against Rickard because Risko was not given more consideration for the 1926 titlebout, and he may not enter Risko in Rickard's heavyweight elimination treasury at all.

"Rickard gave my boy the run around after he whipped Sharkey when the best Heeney could do was to get a draw with him," Dunn said. "The competition is wide open now and I don't see why he should wait on Rickard. Risko is ready to meet all comers and prove he's the best active heavyweight in the world."

Rickard went on a fishing trip after Tunney's retirement and will not return to the city until next week. Until that time his plans for the heavyweight tournament will remain undetermined.

Watching the Scoreboard

(By United Press)

Yesterday's Hero—Henry Johnson, pitcher for the New York Yankees, who made five hits in five times at bat against the St. Louis Browns. Babe Ruth's 42nd home run of the season was only part of the slugfest enjoyed by the Yankees in winning over the Browns, 12 to 1. Bob Meusel added a homer in the sixth. Babe Ruth now needs only 19 more homers to surpass his record of 60. The Yanks have 52 more games.

The Philadelphia Athletics kept pace with the Yanks by defeating Cleveland 6 to 4. Willis Hudlin was driven from the box under a barrage of extra base hits by Miller, Haas and Boley.

The Chicago White Sox stretched their winning streak to five games by winning a double-header from the Boston Red Sox 4 to 2 and 7 to 3. Metzler hit two triples and Mostil one. Young Ed Walsh went the route in the nightcap, beating the Red Sox for the second time this season.

An opening inning batting rally that netted seven runs off Tom Zachary and Marberry gave the Detroit Tigers a 10 to 5 victory over the Washington Senators. Hargreave, Detroit catcher, hit a home run in the seventh with two on base.

All National league games were rained out.

WHAT OUTSTANDING STARS DID YESTERDAY

(By United Press)

Babe Ruth—Forty-second home run, a single and scored three runs in two times at bat.

Lou Gehrig—Singled and scored two runs in five times at bat.

Harry Heilmann—Singled, doubled and scored two runs in three times at bat.

Ty Cobb, Frank Frisch, Rogers Hornsby, Hack Wilson and Paul Waner were idle.

WATER FETE HELD ANNUALLY, SHOWS BOYS IN WATER AND FIELD EVENTS

HERB JOESTING IN CHARGE OF WATER EVENTS, COACH DEAN OF FIELD PROGRAM

Camp Lincoln for Boys, fifteen miles north of Brainerd, will hold its annual Water Day carnival Saturday, August 4.

Parents of boys from fourteen states and Canada will be on hand at the carnival which is held yearly in order that they may receive an idea of what a boy accomplishes during the summer at Minnesota's oldest boys' camp.

The entire day will be spent showing the boys off in water and field events. Herb Joesting will be in charge of the water events, and Coach E. S. Dean, of Indiana University, will have charge of the field events.

The morning program will open with a baseball game between the Intermediates and Seniors. These teams have been practicing up all season and are ready to fly at each others' throats. Immediately following the ball game, which will start at 9:30 o'clock, there will be a track meet.

The track meet will consist of dashes, jumps and weight events. At the same time the Seniors and Intermediates are contesting on the field the Juniors will be staging canoe races, and the midgets will be engaged in rowboat races.

Following dinner and rest hour, the day will be given over to water events which shall consist of swimming races, diving contests, canoe tilting, log rolling, and other aquatic sports. Juniors will give an exhibition in calisthenics.

After a buffet supper, which will be served to visitors also, there will be a ball game between the counsellors and the fathers of the boys at camp. Following the game the evening will be closed around a campfire, during which time a general pow-wow and singing contest will be held.

NEXT HEAVYWEIGHT TO COME UP FROM FIGHTERS' RANKS

TEX RICKARD BELIEVES HE WILL BE SOME UNKNOWN YOUNGSTER

WILL CATAPULT TO HIGHEST FISTIC FAME OVER NIGHT, HE DECLARES

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Aug. 2.—(U.P.)—"The next heavyweight champion will come up from the ranks," Tex Rickard said to this correspondent after Gene Tunney announced his retirement from the ring.

The premier promoter of all time believes that the next champion will be some unknown youngster who will catapult to fame over night.

Unless Rickard can uncover some youngster with a punch, the heavyweight elimination tournament which he will stage, beginning in September, is likely to prove as much a disappointment as the last tournament which developed into Tom Heeney as the challenger for Gene Tunney's title.

The first step toward clarifying the heavyweight situation was not made by Rickard, but Humbert J. Fugazy who matched Johnny Risko of Cleveland with Roberti, the giant Italian, for a ten round bout at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, August 15.

Danny Dunn, Risko's manager, holds a grudge against Rickard because Risko was not given more consideration for the 1926 titlebout, and he may not enter Risko in Rickard's heavyweight elimination treasury at all.

"Rickard gave my boy the run around after he whipped Sharkey when the best Heeney could do was to get a draw with him," Dunn said. "The competition is wide open now and I don't see why he should wait on Rickard. Risko is ready to meet all comers and prove he's the best active heavyweight in the world."

Rickard went on a fishing trip after Tunney's retirement and will not return to the city until next week. Until that time his plans for the heavyweight tournament will remain undetermined.

Watching the Scoreboard

(By United Press)

Yesterday's Hero—Henry Johnson, pitcher for the New York Yankees, who made five hits in five times at bat against the St. Louis Browns. Babe Ruth's 42nd home run of the season was only part of the slugfest enjoyed by the Yankees in winning over the Browns, 12 to 1. Bob Meusel added a homer in the sixth. Babe Ruth now needs only 19 more homers to surpass his record of 60. The Yanks have 52 more games.

The Philadelphia Athletics kept pace with the Yanks by defeating Cleveland 6 to 4. Willis Hudlin was driven from the box under a barrage of extra base hits by Miller, Haas and Boley.

The Chicago White Sox stretched their winning streak to five games by winning a double-header from the Boston Red Sox 4 to 2 and 7 to 3. Metzler hit two triples and Mostil one. Young Ed Walsh went the route in the nightcap, beating the Red Sox for the second time this season.

An opening inning batting rally that netted seven runs off Tom Zachary and Marberry gave the Detroit Tigers a 10 to 5 victory over the Washington Senators. Hargreave, Detroit catcher, hit a home run in the seventh with two on base.

All National league games were rained out.

WHAT OUTSTANDING STARS DID YESTERDAY

(By United Press)

Babe Ruth—Forty-second home run, a single and scored three runs in two times at bat.

Lou Gehrig—Singled, and scored two runs in five times at bat.

Harry Heilmann—Singled, doubled and scored two runs in three times at bat.

Ty Cobb, Frank Frisch, Rogers Hornsby, Hack Wilson and Paul Waner were idle.

PARENTS OF BOYS FROM 14 STATES AND CANADA HERE

WATER FETE HELD ANNUALLY, SHOWS BOYS IN WATER AND FIELD EVENTS

HERB JOESTING IN CHARGE OF WATER EVENTS, COACH DEAN OF FIELD PROGRAM

Camp Lincoln for Boys, fifteen miles north of Brainerd, will hold its annual Water Day carnival Saturday, August 4.

Parents of boys from fourteen states and Canada will be on hand at the carnival which is held yearly in order that they may receive an idea of what a boy accomplishes during the summer at Minnesota's oldest boys' camp.

The entire day will be spent showing the boys off in water and field events. Herb Joesting will be in charge of the water events, and Coach E. S. Dean, of Indiana University, will have charge of the field events.

The morning program will open with a baseball game between the Intermediates and Seniors. These teams have been practicing up all season and are ready to fly at each others' throats. Immediately following the ball game, which will start at 9:30 o'clock, there will be a track meet.

The track meet will consist of dashes, jumps and weight events. At the same time the Seniors and Intermediates are contesting on the field the Juniors will be staging canoe races, and the midgets will be engaged in rowboat races.

Following dinner and rest hour, the day will be given over to water events which shall consist of swimming races, diving contests, canoe tilting, log rolling, and other aquatic sports. Juniors will give an exhibition in calisthenics.

After a buffet supper, which will be served to visitors also, there will be a ball game between the counsellors and the fathers of the boys at camp. Following the game the evening will be closed around a campfire, during which time a general pow-wow and singing contest will be held.

Our Olympic Shot Tossers

By QUIN HALL.

OUR BOYS who sailed away on the President Roosevelt to stretch their muscular arms in the business of tossing the 16-pound shot go into action this afternoon at Amsterdam.

And in this event, as in almost all of the field and track events, Uncle Sam is ably represented. The shot-putting aggregation is composed of Herman H. Brix, University of Washington; H. P. Rothert, Stanford University; John Kuck, Los Angeles A. C., and Eric Krenz, Stanford. These metal handlers finished the finals at Cambridge in the order named, and it will be noticed that all of them hail from the Pacific Coast, which should prove something or other about the Pacific Coast.

Brix, from the far Northwest, won the U. S. finals at Cambridge with a toss which came within a quarter of an inch of the world's record of 51 feet. This world's mark was rung up by Ralph Rose in August of 1909, and Brix's mark not only came within a fraction of this figure but was well over the best Olympic mark of 50 feet 3 7-8 inches, achieved by P. J. McDonald during the Stockholm meet in 1912.

When it comes to the weight events the United States will undoubtedly meet some keen foreign competition. While the U. S. holds the Olympic records in all of the weight contests, our entries may have difficulty in establishing their supremacy in the shotput this afternoon, despite the remarkable performance of the Washington crack. But if Brix can duplicate the toss he made at Cambridge he will finish, if not at the top, then only a scant distance behind the leader. Krenz, a powerful weight hurler, may surprise everyone by doing the unlooked-for. Eric is capable and so is Rothert and Kuck. The result of this event will be looked forward to with interest.

Another final which will be run off this afternoon is the hop, step and jump, and while the chief interest from a U. S. standpoint in this event centers around Levi Casey, the National champion from Los Angeles, who won the final at Cambridge, a lot of our folks will be watching the destiny of Bob Kelly, the forty-year-old athlete representing the Olympic Club of San Francisco. Bob, it will be recalled, is the fellow who has been seeking athletic fame over a number of years. Starting as a youngster he has kept consistently at it. Each year he would pick out some new event and practice for a season at that event. Meeting failure meant only the selecting of another event the following year, and Bob finally made good in the triple leap, and he's a member of this year's team. If only as a reward for persistency, it would tickle all of the folks over here if Kelly finds a place for himself among the leaders in this event. Besides Casey and Kelly the other members of the team for this contest are Sidney Bowman, the high school youth from Hammond, La., who finished second to Casey at Cambridge, and Lloyd H. Bourgeois, of the Southern Pacific A. A., New Orleans.

The final for the 1,500-meter for men and the 800-meter for women are also scheduled for this afternoon at Amsterdam. At Cambridge, Ray Conger, of the Illinois A. S., won this event and established a new American record of 3:55. Other members of the U. S. team in this contest will be Sid Robertson, New York A. C.; Nick Carter, Los Angeles A. C., and Lloyd Hahn, Boston A. A. The fellows in this race are sure to meet some good competition from foreign entries, but Uncle Sam should grab some winning points in all of these various finals.

Chief Avery hurried to the address. He found Woolsey sitting on the veranda smoking a cigar.

"How do you, chief," Woolsey greeted the police chief. "Step up stairs with me, please."

The body of Mrs. Woolsey, washed carefully and free of bloodstains, lay on the floor of the bath room. She had been shot three times.

"Now step in the next room," Woolsey ordered.

Lost Silk Sheen Restored

That the original sheen of silk, artificial fiber and mercerized cotton may be restored is claimed by chemists in Berlin, who say they have found a new chemical preparation for the purpose. All that is necessary to restore the gloss is to wash the material in the chemical, which is said to also act as a disinfectant.

"LIMPY" CLEAVER FOUND GUILTY ON 7 COUNTS

TRIED IN CONNECTION WITH $133,000 MAIL ROBBERY

CHAS. WHARTON, FORMER ASSISTANT STATE'S ATTORNEY, GUILTY ON 1 CHARGE

Chicago, Aug. 2.—(UP)—Charles "Limpy" Cleaver today was found guilty on seven counts in connection with the $133,000 Evergreen Park mail robbery here last February and Charles Wharton, former assistant state's attorney, was found guilty of one charge in the indictments.

The jury in the case deliberated until shortly after 10 P. M. yesterday when it announced a sealed verdict and retired. The verdict was opened today.

The charges against the two accused them of robbery, robbery with a firearm and conspiracy to rob the mails. Cleaver was found guilty of all, while Wharton was found guilty only of the conspiracy charge.

The maximum penalty for Cleaver would be 47 years in the state penitentiary and $10,000 fine and for Wharton would be 2 years and $10,000 fine.

Argument for a new trial was to begin immediately.

The robbery of the mail train at Evergreen Park occurred last February. There were eight men in the robbery. Three of them, Frank Meccia, William Donovan and Larry O'Brien, confessed to their part and implicated Cleaver and Wharton.

Cleaver was accused of being the leader of the gang. The eight men climbed aboard the train, blew open the mail coach and escaped with registered sacks containing $133,000.

The robbery took about 12 minutes. Much of the loot has been recovered but there still is about $50,000 missing. No trace has been found of the other three participants in the robbery.

Cleaver maintained a sneering attitude throughout the trial, but today when the verdict was announced he showed signs of the strain.

Wharton formerly was an assistant in the office of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe. He was accused of knowledge of the robbery and a part of the loot was found in his home. He denied knowledge of its being there.

Rate Cut in Electricity Vouchsafed Illinois

Chicago, Aug. 2.—(UP) — About 115,000 persons in Chicago will benefit by over $2,000,000 if the Illinois commerce commission approves a rate cut in electricity announced here by the Commonwealth Edison Company. It is the second cut announced this year by the company.

Under the new schedule, the net price of electricity will be $2.20 a month per kilowatt of maximum demand plus 2.7 cents per kilowatt hour for electricity used.

BRAINERD'S ODDEST STORY OF TODAY

Among many desirable things that Brainerd can boast of are clovers with more than the customary three leaves.

Verification of this statement is made by Mrs. M. Finne who reported she found four, five, six seven, and eight leaf clovers in a clover patch in Southeast Brainerd yesterday.

M. E. Hitch, spending the summer at his cottage on Gull Lake, records an unusual experience. Returning from a fishing trip, he left the baited line and pole in his boat and walked to the cottage. A great flapping of wings greeted him a few minutes later. A big blue crane was winging his way to Squaw Point dragging line and pole. The bird had swallowed minnow and hook. It was quite a load to carry with a hook anchored in his stomach and the bird stopped at intervals to catch his breath. As soon as Mr. Hitch neared the resting bird, he would again fly away.

RAISE $200 FOR BOYS, GIRLS FAIR

ARRANGE PRIZE LIST

Committee Solicits Merchants for $300 to Successfully Put Across Fair

Solicitation of funds and merchandise to make up prizes to be awarded the winners of the Boys and Girls club fair in all projects of the club here August 17 and 18, is meeting with success according to County Agent E. G. Roth who reported today that over $200 of the $300 needed had been raised.

The fair will be held in the vacant lot across from the Standard Lumber Co. Exhibits will be made in poultry, sheep, calf, dairying, gardening, potatoes, and canning.

The committee in charge of soliciting funds are: E. G. Roth, W. S. Tyrholm, and J. H. Kinney.

A similar fair will be held at Crosby on August 20, 21.

HIDING NUMBERS

This simple number game will prove attractive to children from five to eight years old. Pringle Barret wrote about it in the Child Life Magazine.

Cut little squares of paper and number them: 1, 2, 3, and so forth. Give each child one piece of paper and ask him to add his initials to the number on it, and then to hide it as quickly and as quietly as possible. As soon as each child has hiden his piece, he goes to a corner of the room and sits down quietly. When all the children are sitting hus, it is time to begin the hunt. The point is to find the number that follows your number. The child who finds the correct number first wins.

THE DOLLIES' TEA PARTY

(Dorothy Aldis in Child Life Magazine)

When we have tea I like to sit
And hold the pot and pour;
There isn't any tea in it—
But still there's always more.

And when I say, "You'll have some cream?"
Or, "Are four lumps too many?"
They're so polite—they never seem
To know there isn't any.

And when an empty plate is passed
They gobble up the cookies fast.

DANCERS FEEL GRIND

Hoofers Pass 111th Hour at 3 P. M. Today; Ten Couples Still Going

The grind is telling but determination conquers weariness in the marathon dance at Lum Park as it continues at 3 o'clock this afternoon through the 111th hour with ten couples still hoofing.

Today the 20 marathoners are one happy-go-lucky family even though they are a tired one. But the wee hours of the morning as the dancers awoke from their 15 minute rest period at 3 o'clock told a different story. Dissension arose in the ranks of the weary when one couple's heated arguments spread like wild fire to the others. For a while it looked as though the marathon was at an end and that the dance would culminate in one grand melee. But as the minutes dragged on and light once more began to steal through the curtained windows of the pavilion all arguments were forgotten. Officials this morning reported that last night was the most severe they had experienced in the meet yet. Today they are happy as order reigns but there remains a slight uneasiness of what the coming night will bring.

The male partner of No. 3 was practically out on his feet last evening. He swayed and was on the verge of toppling when the whistle sounded for the rest period. He was carried off the floor. Fifteen minutes later after his swollen feet had been bandaged he was again in the arena going through the paces, half dancing, half dragging himself around. Today his fallen arches were relieved by supporters.

Lady No. 2 changed her clothes six times last evening. Following each rest period she appeared on the floor in a complete new outfit looking more fit than during the previous hour. It is her first marathon and she admits she is enjoying herself immensely.

The Brainerd couples were looking just as fit as any of them today.

A dial has been placed in the Peterson Clothing Co. window indicating the hourly progress of the dancers.

COWBOY BAND TO HEADLINE SHOW

Link Bowline and His Musicians Come to Park Theatre Sunday

PAT DALY ON PROGRAM

Harold Alberto is True Artist of Mystery, Named "The Gay Deceiver"

Link Bowline's Oklahoma Cowboy band is presented as the feature act Sunday matinee and evening at the Park theatre in "Clean Wholesome Entertainment" recalling former days when cowboys rode the fences by day and rounded the herds at night.

Pat Daly, although a youthful fellow is one of the oldest comics of his type in vaudeville. For the last three seasons he has been featured in all the big time houses. He is assisted by Gene Gray, an attractive and talented young lady who does an admirable foil for comedy in the offering which they call "The Height of Ignorance." Pat's hefty avoirdupois adds to his whimsical and original witty "get backs" and 'wise cracks."

Cropley and Violet are an unusual combination. A dancing cowboy and a petite danseuse. Most of their dancing work is done while spinning ropes, climaxed with a beautiful adagio dance number.

Harold Alberto is rightly termed "The Gay Deceiver." He is both gay and mystifying. He sells personality and humor and his tricks are executed with a finish and polish which denotes the true artist. He has an entertaining way of burlesquing his own tricks and is as nimble of tongue as he is with his fingers.

Comedy, talking, singing, dancing, whistling, form the act of Evelyn Regan who has possibilities of future starring chances as she exhibits a fine personality as well as versatile ability.

It costs very little to recondition a MODEL T FORD

FOR nearly twenty years, the Model T Ford led the motor industry and it still is used by more people than any other automobile. More than eight million Model T Fords are in active service today—an indication of their sturdy worth, reliability and economy.

The cost of reconditioning the Model T Ford is small because of the low cost of Ford parts and the established Ford policy of charging all labor at a standard flat rate.

For a labor charge of $20 to $25 you can have your motor and transmission completely overhauled. This price includes new bearings, reboring cylinders and any other work necessary. Parts are extra.

Valves can be ground and carbon removed for $3 to $4. The cost of tightening all main bearings is only $6. The labor charge for overhauling the front axle is $4.50 to $5—rear axle assembly, $5.75 to $7.

New universal joint will be installed for a labor charge of $3. Brake shoes relined for $1.50. Rear spring and perches rebushed for $1.75. The cost of overhauling the starting motor is $3. A labor charge of approximately $2.50 covers the overhauling of the generator.

Repainting runs from $10 to $25. Taking dents out of body panels and doors runs from $3 to $16 for labor. A fender can be replaced for a labor charge of $1 to $2.50. The cost of fenders runs from $3.50 to $5.

It will pay you, therefore, to see your Ford dealer and have him put your Model T in good running order. By doing so you will protect and maintain the investment you have in your car and get months and years of pleasant, reliable transportation at a very low cost per mile.

Kittenball Game, Tug-of-War, Races Dancing on Program Sunday

COMMITTEE NAMED

Picnic Has Been Anual Event Fo the Past Seven Years

A very enjoyable day is anticipated by the Eagles and their familie when they get together for the seventh annual picnic at Birchdale on North Long lake, about seven miles northeast of Brainerd Sunday

A kittenball game, a tug of wa and a number of running races are promised on the program. Lou's Band has been engaged to furnish dance music during both the afternoon and evening, for the dancing enthusiasts.

James H. Brotherson, chairman of the picnic committee, has asked that all members who have no means of transportation notify him so that no Eagle or his family will be left behind. Others on the committee in charge of the picnic are: Ray Law John Dullum, John Peterson and J A. Larson.

The lodge will furnish free coffee, cream and sugar for the picnic, and members are requested to bring well packed lunch baskets and cups.

The kittenball game between the skinnies and the fatties promise to vie with the tug of war and the married and single men for the most bitterly fought contest of the day.

BLOWOUT CAUSES ACCIDENT

Walter Van Doren, Painfully Scratched, When Motorcycle Tire Blows Out

Walter Van Doren of the Lake Region Motor Company suffered scratches and a badly bruised knee last evening when the front tire of the motorcycle he was driving blew out. He was west of the M. and I. tracks on highway No. 19 when the accident occurred.

Although he was able to keep his damaged motorcycle out of the ditch he was painfully, though not seriously hurt.
